

THE AUTHORS /LES AUTEURS

JOSEPH H. CHUNG is Professor in the Department of Economics at the University of Quebec at Montreal and Director of the Laboratory for Research in Real Estate. He is the author of various works on urban and regional economics and has a special interest in the relationship between urban systems and regional development policy.

RONALD W. CROWLEY is with Treasury Board Canada on assignment to the Executive Group, Management Training Program, Public Service Commission of Canada. Among other positions, he was formerly Director General, Policy and Research, Ministry of State for Urban Affairs. He has authored numerous articles and books on economics and public policy and is co-author of Changing Canadian Cities: The Next Twenty Five Years (1977).

GERARD DIVAY is Professor at the Institut national de la recherche scientifique-Urbanisation in Montreal. He has published numerous works on urban and regional planning, housing policy, and the Montreal Urban Community and is the Director of a major research project on nouveaux espaces résidentiels.

AUDREY D. DOERR is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science and Associate Dean of Graduate Studies at Simon Fraser University. Her research interests include public policy analysis and government organization. She is the author of The Machinery of Government in Canada and senior editor and contributor to Women and the Constitution.

TERRENCE J. DOWNEY is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Waterloo, Waterloo, Ontario. His work includes representation and methods of election in Ontario's regional governments, the political economy of communities of single enterprises, and the politics of Canadian resource development. He is currently preparing a manuscript on the Development of the Canadian Uranium Industry.

MARCEL GAUDREAU is Agent de recherche at the Institut national de la recherche scientifique-Urbanisation in Montreal. His work has included studies of the Montreal Urban Community, urban public policy, housing, and urban recreational spaces. He has collaborated with Gérard Divay and others on a major project on nouveaux espaces résidentiels.

THOMAS I. GUNTON is currently Assistant Professor of geography and resource management at Simon Fraser University and has been a consultant to several provincial governments on regional development policy.

PETER HOMENUCK is Professor of Environmental Studies at York University, where he teaches courses in community and social planning. In addition, he has been involved in a variety of planning activities, including the social planning of new communities, social impact analyses of proposed developments, and social program planning.

ANN MARKUSEN is Assistant Professor of City and Regional Planning at University of California, Berkeley. Her work includes regional economic change, national urban policy and regional planning issues. She is currently writing a book on Regional Political Economy.

ALLAN O'BRIEN is Professor of Political Science at the University of Western Ontario. He has been Mayor of Halifax, N. S., President of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, Chairman of the Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research, and a member of MSUA's committee on the Canadian Urban Demonstration Program.

ANELLA PARKER MARTIN has extensive experience in community development, social planning and urban planning policy analysis. She has recently completed a Master's degree in Environmental Studies at York University, where she is a Fellow. Currently Ms. Parker Martin is working as a planning consultant and writing a book on the alternate social economy of the future.

CLYDE WEAVER teaches regional development and planning at the University of British Columbia. He is co-author with John Friedmann of Territory and Function: The Evolution of Regional Planning and has recently finished a new book entitled Anarchy, Planning and Regional Development (John Wiley, forthcoming).

BARRY S. WELLAR is Professor, School of Urban and Regional Planning, and Department of Geography, the University of Ottawa. He was formerly a Director, and a Senior Policy Advisor, Ministry of State for Urban Affairs, Government of Canada. He recently edited National and Regional Economic Development Strategies: Perspectives on Canada's Problems and Prospects, and is consulting on a "National Rural Development Strategy" for the U.S. federal government.

DAVID WILMOTH is a graduate student in the Department of City and Regional Planning at the University of California, Berkeley. He has been active in planning national urban policy in Australia, and is currently writing a dissertation on U.S. national urban policy.